This software is designed to enable you to create any type of final image that you wish, be it a greeting card, a t-shirt, or a corporate logo. It's really up to you to decide what you do with the software. You can leave it at just a simple color picker or save-and-edit a webpage to make it look better. As you place layers and apply color, text, or other designs, you build up layers to manipulate the image. * Document: Layers make it easy to organize and manage the various portions of the document, where you can drop images, save and create your own custom page layouts, and move around your image. * Modify: You have a library of filters to add character to your images. You can also use image-editing software to add blur, warp, blur, and change filters. * Effects: Some filters (called _effects_) add effects and special visual effects to your image. You may want to apply a flame to an image or a cartoon effect, and you can do it. * Draw: You can draw with the ability to hold a pen tool over your image, then use color, size, and line thickness to change things. * Mask: _Masks_ enable you to restrict color or lighting changes to a particular part of an image. Q: Django: How to prevent service failure during development? I have a Django application using a Celery task queue and RabbitMQ as a broker. Recently I have experienced that when the application starts, the RabbitMQ instance shuts down itself (probably due to running out of memory). I have recently read the solution to the problem here: Django + RabbitMQ/RabbitMq + Celery: how to handle periodic tasks with a semi-stale data? However, that won't help, since this happens while the development is running. I start the development server via manage.py runserver and so does the RabbitMQ instance at the same time, which means that the first thing the RabbitMQ instance does is to shut itself down. How can I prevent this in development? One idea would be to move away from the Django development server and/or any other server, but that is not an option. A: Have you tried using Fabric to manage your multiple deployments? You could possibly keep the local server alive for as long as you want while you test. /* Copyright 2017, 2020 Martin Gieseking Redistribution and use in source and binary forms, with or without modification, are permitted provided that the following conditions are met: 1. NAVAL AIR STATION CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. -- Thirty-one years to the day that three of the most feared members of a criminal organization detonated a bomb in the parking lot of a New York City shopping mall, FBI agents and others arrested a number of members of the group April 19 in the parking lot of the Naval Air Station in western Massachusetts. As the criminal organization's leader and his longtime military bodyguard left the building, they were pursued by police and FBI agents. One defendant attempted to grab an FBI agent's gun while another defendant stabbed a police officer's hand with a screwdriver. All four defendants -- Mara Salvatrucha, or MS-13, members Hugo Calderon-Valencia, Gustavo Suarez, Alexander Perez and Carlos Perez -- were charged with conspiracy to murder and conspiracy to distribute marijuana. The gang is based in El Salvador, and the members originally migrated from there to the United States in the 1980s. At approximately 4 p.m. on April 19, 2012, Salvadoran authorities arrested the leader, a Salvadoran national and a resident of El Salvador, who was the head of a criminal organization operating in El Salvador and the United States. Court documents allege the defendant had intimate knowledge of a sophisticated, multi-million dollar marijuana-trafficking organization that operated in El Salvador and New York. Court documents also allege the defendant was responsible for planning, and with others, executing the shooting death of a member of a rival gang outside a New York City hospital in 2010. Court documents also allege the defendant was responsible for recruiting members of the MS-13 gang, and protecting MS-13's growing operations in El Salvador and the United States. A short time later, police and FBI agents observed the defendant leaving the building with an unidentified woman and a man. The three men ran, but were captured and arrested following an approximately 30-minute chase. The defendant then allegedly retrieved a gun from his pants pocket and, while holding the gun in his right hand, struck the hand of one of the agents. Meanwhile, an FBI helicopter was hovering near the area and agents were able to see the men before they could make it to the side of the building. Police attempted to restrain the four men, but were met with blows and tussles. Calderon-Valencia allegedly attacked a police officer, while Suarez and Perez fought with police officers. While the four men were struggling, Suarez allegedly stabbed
