Take control of a blindfolded woman, and drag your mouse in the direction you want her to walk. Drag it very, very slowly and she'll react accordingly. The goal of the game is to have her rest her shoulder on a bowl filled with peanuts and then drink water from the bowl. Depending on how she drinks, she'll make various sounds. Notes: CLT is free to play, but you'll need to buy some peanuts with real money to play. Some of the game's stages are lengthy. Some of the game's stages are very short. There are three difficulties, and each level plays differently depending on how fast the woman walks. The aim of the game isn't to reach the end, but to get the most money. CLT is inspired by music, art, philosophy and more, and was made by Alan Becker with the help of Felix Au. There is a regular soundtrack that was made available for this game, as well as a more expansive soundtrack. The more you spend on the game, the more content you'll receive. Please note: CLT is not a game about rape. 1. An Introduction to the Basics In this lesson, we'll look at what media is and the basics of media literacy (or media education). We're going to look at how music was done from the early days of the printing press to the present day. We're going to also talk about the legal and political context surrounding the music industry and the struggles that music and artists have faced. If you want to learn more about the history of the music industry, you can check out these podcasts: Episode 1 - The History of Music Episode 2 - The Evolution of The Music Industry Episode 3 - The Past, Present, and Future of Music Each of these episodes are roughly 30 minutes long and you can listen to them all on Soundcloud. Warpaint was born from an experiment in developing a game of grand strategic warfare where both the art and the science is as important as the tactical in-the-heat-of-battle game. The first Warpaint prototype was a cat-and-mouse game which was intended to play as chess, but with catapults, and dwarves, and an RPG system to adjudicate turn-based combat. We've taken a lot of lessons from that first game, and we think the result is Warpaint: a chess with catapults. The game was designed with the following objectives in mind: - Catchy and intuitive gameplay - Dynamic play-experience - Interesting unit design - Meaningful unit capabilities - Suitable for hardcore and casual players At its core, Warpaint is a great game of dual-tactics, with a stylized aesthetic and a unique atmosphere created by the catapults. Level of Rules Detail The game has been developed for both seasoned and new players, so it has an explanation of how to play, as well as a detailed ruleset. Some parts of the rules are summarized in the player's manual. Artistic Quality The game was created with the intention of providing a look and feel that gives the impression of a magical chess. The painted miniatures have excellent art quality. In addition, the game was developed with a loose goal of naturalism. For example, each species has its own unique stone texture.
