The known gelling agents that are useful for the manufacture of zinc and magnesium batteries, such as alkaline cells, do not function optimally with lead acid battery applications. I need to compare a string with length of 10 characters. If it does not have 10 characters, I need to throw a warning and prompt for re-entering the string. I have tried using the characters function, but I do not think that that does the trick here. A: In my experience, try this: SSIS (Data Operations) Conditional Split Transformation. You will need to add a conditional split. Inside the conditional split, add a Compare String function. Then you need to add an expression to the Input0 to control your validation.
