Using data from my recent research in the English NHS and also collected in nationally representative surveys, it looks at whether and how customers feel about the service they receive, including how they feel about the storage of their goods. As a building block of any future policy, whether in the public or private sector, there are challenges for policy makers in what an ideal service offers, in particular the interactions between customers and staff.Q: Convert System.

I try to port the windows 8 app (VS 2012) to windows 8.1. I used visual studio toolchain to compile the sourcecode to x86 universal app. The app is written in c++ and I'd like to port it to WinRT. I tried to change the c++-implicitly compile option from x86-windows-gnu/x86-windows-msvc to clang/clang-windows-msvc. clang version: 2.9.1-7 And the x64 project build fine. But when i tried to build the x86 project, I get the following error: Error 3 error C2027: use of undefined type 'char' I couldn't find any post about it. Is the clang-windows-msvc compiler not able to compile winRT-sources? I'm using mingw 4.8.1 and the gcc version is 4.8.1 also with clang. Edit: I tried to compile the project using gnu compiler. It's also not working, I get the same error. A: I installed clang-win64-x86_64 and using clang-win64-x86_64/bin/clang-win64-x86_64++.exe I compile the project. And I get the following error, Error 1 error C2065: 'printf' : undecl 6d1f23a050
