SpaceSniffer is a free (donations welcome) portable tool to understand how folders and files are structured on your drives. It can display, for example, that files and folders in different directories are structured by folder, file name, and path. You can also do the opposite. It displays the directory structure of, for example, your drive as a tree. SpaceSniffer uses its own browser which is different from other directory browsers. It uses its own algorithms for navigation, allowing you to see and understand the directory structure. The browsing interface can be very simple or very complex.
