in 2011, nintendo world contacted guasti about an email he received from a nintendo employee with the subject line, "please help". the email claimed that a nintendo employee was attempting to break into a customer's wii and had been dropped off by a friend of a friend at his house. the person had obtained the password to the wii's mii channel by first changing it to, "password." this message was sent to guasti by a third party service, nintendocare. nintendocare has been confirmed as a subsidiary of nintendo, but it is unclear why a nintendo employee would be contacting guasti about an issue that could be dealt with directly by the company. in june 2013, software developer ryan barrett started a project he dubbed the nintendo 2d games collection, [21] hoping to convince nintendo to make all of the nes/famicom games available for download on the 3ds eshop. this offer was swiftly rejected by nintendo. the nintendo 2d games collection blog began posting nintendo 2d game emulators in january 2013, [22] with a total of 14 games in the collection by the end of may 2013. the zz emulator was the first to be released, [23] followed by the ds virtual console emulator. the collection was later expanded to include virtual boy games and game boy advance games, [24] along with other nintendo-published games and emulators. in december 2013, a rameshbhai named infinity purchased gocomics from ryan barrett, [25] who had been maintaining rameshbhai's personal website. the software that infinity bought from ryan was, at the time, the gocomics emulator.

the game was originally intended to release in 2001, but was delayed due to the lack of nintendo's approval and the team's decision to make a multiplayer version. it was not until the gamecube's debut that the game was released. it debuted in japan in late 2002 and in north america in late 2003. the game made its way to europe in 2005. the game features a world map similar to f-zero. to celebrate the 10 year anniversary of super mario kart, nintendo released super mario kart deluxe for wii u. this game is a remake of super mario kart for the nintendo 64, being developed by the same team that developed super mario kart for the super nintendo entertainment system, which is now the best-selling game in the series. it includes a new course called mario circuit, which is the default course featured in mario kart wii and mario kart 8. it includes several new features, such as online play, online ranking, and the ability to unlock a new item called the smoke as well as the ability to purchase gold coins from nintendo's online store. the game also includes online play via the nintendo network, which is used to send items such as coins and other items to another player, and the ability to upload gameplay videos to youtube. as nintendo had done with super mario kart, nintendo developed wii u mario kart 8 for the wii u. this is a remake of mario kart wii, being developed by the same team that developed mario kart wii for the nintendo wii. with the exception of the new mario circuit, the game has the same items, amount of tracks, and other aspects of the previous game. 5ec8ef588b
