another way to collect beads is to collect the 6th bead of each matching set. each bead set is color-coded, and what you have to do to collect the beads is to complete the color-coded bead set. for example, if you have completed a certain set of beaded jars, another set of colored beads with a color you did not yet complete in a previous stage will appear. if the colors are a matching set, the color of the jars from the next stage will be shown after unlocking a bonus round for completing this set. while collecting beads for leveling up, you can collect beads in multiple ways including beating the stage time, the number of moves, beating all four of the original stages and beating the stage in the minimum time. there are a few secondary beads that you can also collect that do not increase your bead bonus (red dots on the purple line), but mainly increase one of four different point multipliers. they are the following: 1x, 2x, 3x, and 4x. as previously mentioned, the three color squares on the playfield are played in some fashion: red is worth 100 points for every match; blue is worth 25 points for every match; yellow is worth 50 points for every match. the scoring in luxor goes beyond just the basics: there are a variety of bonuses awarded at the end of levels based upon one or more factors of scoring and gameplay. many of these bonuses are specific to level numbers. for example, this level's bonuses consist of items, value multipliers, and so on:

luxor 3 has a four-player multiplayer mode where players can play online with any three people. the game has a multi-tiered ranking system, which grants players a ranking based on their scores. the rankings are based on performance in the following:

- game play: this is based on the performance in the game.
- personal score: this is based on the performance on the person's personal best times.
- timed play: this is based on the performance in the game.
- online score: this is based on the performance in the game while playing on a public server. luxor 3 has a gamepad support option that lets you play with a gamepad to complete the game. if you are using a gamepad, it is recommended to set the game sensitivity to a lower level, as the game uses a lot of gamepad buttons to control the game. the scarab controls mechanics are new to luxor 3. the scarab controls the primary fire, movement, and jump. it also controls a power up that lets you shoot 3 additional spheres of the same color at once. when a scarab is collected, it starts out with 10% power. with enough scarabs collected, the scarab's power will increase until it is maxed out at 100%. this power up becomes stronger as the game goes on, but it is also affected by the level difficulty, so it is not possible to level up a scarab on a harder difficulty. unlike previous luxor games, there is no limit to the number of scarabs the scarab can collect. the scarabs are found as you play the game. they can be collected by shooting at them while avoiding the spheres. some scarabs are more difficult to destroy than others. for example, an orange scarab is harder to destroy than a white scarab. once you have collected enough scarabs, you can use them to upgrade your scarabs. to upgrade a scarab, place it in the scarab upgrade menu and you will be able to upgrade the scarab from 10% to 100% power. 5ec8ef588b
