It was started in 1993 by the brothers Shaggy A. Bag and Shaggy B. Bag. Once known as Shag Nation, the group gained national recognition after the release of the album "Da Truth The Faith" in 1996. The band's current lineup includes the Shagg Nation and The Shagg Nation Reunion Band. The Shagg Nation was formed in 1993 in Louisiana by Shaggy A. Bag and Shaggy B. Bag.[2] A third member later joined the group, only known by the name Shaggy B.[3] The group was originally a rap collective that was centered around the East Feliciana Parish. The group then got the name "Shag Nation" after receiving a trademark that they claim was stolen from them.[3] In 1994, the group relocated to Greenville, South Carolina. Soon after, they became a part of the Seven Nation Army collective and released the single "Da Truth The Faith". The song became the group's first national hit.[3] Following this song, the group gained popularity. Soon, the group was signed to Universal Records. The group went on to release two albums: Da Truth The Faith in 1996 and More Than Words Can Say in 1999.[3] After the release of Da Truth The Faith, Shag Nation also gained attention in the Catholic Church. The group became known for using extreme anti-Catholicism in their songs. This is best shown in the song "My Anti-Sistah".[3] In the song, they express their anti-Catholicism towards nuns. The song then contains various lines against the Virgin Mary, Jesus and the Pope. The song was viewed as anti-Catholic and it became an international controversy. The group eventually came back from this controversy and
